Following the most destructive wildfire season in the state's history, Governor Newsom and legislators are working together to take unprecedented actions to protect Californians from catastrophic wildfire risks. The Governor has proposed $1 billion investment in regionally-prioritized work to harden homes, build protective fuel breaks and complete projects to improve the health of the state's forests and diverse landscapes. This proposed investment is built on California's new Wildfire and Forest Resilience Action Plan.

Join us for a discussion with a range of key partners about this Action Plan and proposed investment. Your engagement will help shape this effort.
